

Lever Press is committed to a business model that never requires its authors to pay publishing fees. However, Lever will accept funding from a source other than the author's institution in order to support publication enhancements (e.g., technical innovations, translations) or to defray production costs. Such subventions have no bearing on manuscript acquisition decisions or contracting.